Notice to Automobile Owners

You have been reading in the State newspapers regarding reductions in rates on personal liability automobile insurance premiums of 20% for holders of "A" cards and 10% for holders of "B" and "C" cards. The press reports led us to believe that these reductions had been approved by the State Corporation Commission for Virginia and would go into effect at once. This, however, was not correct.

We wish to state to our present and future policyholders that just as soon as these reductions in rates are approved by the State Corporation Commission, everyone of our customers who comes under these classifications, will be given full advantage of these reductions.

We sincerely hope and believe that the State Corporation Commission, when it meets on November 24 to consider this matter, will grant Virginia automobile policyholders this reduction which we think they deserve. Until the Commission does so, however, agents in Virginia are not permitted to grant these reductions.

General Electric

On the Seven Seas

For 45 years General Electric has developed and built electric equipment for warships. Here are a few of the ways in which electricity serves the Navy.

1. Just one battleship may have electric generators to produce as much as 180,000 kilowatts. This power would supply the needs of a city of 375,000.

2. Searchlights produce millions of candlepower of light to aid in detecting enemy ships and planes, and to guide Navy gunners to their targets.

3. More than 20 different operations are performed in bringing a naval gun to bear on its target. Electricity helps to co-ordinate these operations.

4. When a battleship goes into action, electricity helps direct the ship, operate the guns, and give the orders. G. E. is building equipment to do these jobs.

General Electric believes that its first duty as a good citizen is to be a good soldier.

Behind the Fighting Front...

Grim and tough, he and his buddies are out there somewhere—fighting. And here at home, millions of more Americans are training intensively... toughening up... getting ready... to join them.

The tremendous expansion and intensive training of our armed forces demanded the biggest transportation job in history. That meant railroad transportation—the continuous, mass transportation of men, munitions and equipment throughout the vast expanse of this land. These demands are being met—efficiently and safely.

Called on overnight, after the enemy struck at Pearl Harbor, the American railroads carried in organized movements during the first ten months of the war, more than 8,000,000 troops! Nearly four times more than in the same period of World War I. In addition, unknown numbers on furlough have traveled on regular trains.

It takes a lot of railroad equipment to handle the nation's armed forces. For example: To move one triangular infantry division of 15,000 men with their fighting equipment, requires 65 trains with 1,350 cars. Moreover, soldiers in this war are moved from five to six times during the training period, as compared with three times in the last war. They use 40 percent of the sleeping cars, 66 percent travel in Pullmans—and 15 percent of the coaches, continuously. And they have first class call on all the rest. On top of that, the railroads are carrying millions of persons who formerly traveled by highway.

It all adds up to a tremendous increase—and when war necessities have made it impossible to get additional equipment. The railroads are getting every spark of service out of every unit of equipment they own. So, please remember this: When you can't get what you want on a train today, it is because our fighting men have the right-of-way. That's as it should be, and as every patriotic American wants it to be.

The Norfolk and Western Railway and the Norfolk and Western Family are in this war with everything they have. And they are proud that they can carry their full quota of America's fighting men, who will win complete and uncompromising Victory.
